

Sabrina & Scott

When Sabrina just happened to reconnect with a high school friend after ten years, she had no idea she would be setting into the motion the events that would lead to her wedding day. On the verge of giving up on dating altogether, Sabrina almost turned down this friend's suggestion of being introduced to Scott, but something told her to give it a shot. It turned out to be a huge success, and would lead to a magical wedding day at Pagoda Resort & Spa. The couple wanted their wedding to be as unique and quirky as they are, putting together a laid-back and whimsical event. There were unconventional touches throughout, such as Scott wearing his Jordan sneakers and Sabrina wearing white boots – 'comfort is key', as they say! A 'Til Death Do Us Part' coffin wishing well was certainly a unique one, along with many other personal finishes that the couple chose, such as Sabrina's favourite colour teal popping up throughout the styling, right down to the Kombi van transport. The ceremony was a heartwarming celebration of love in the gorgeous Historic Ballroom, where Sabrina walked down the aisle to Sleeping At Last's beautiful song 'Turning Page', played acoustically by Adrian Wilson. The pair also included a unique, sand unity ceremony, symbolising the joining together of the two individuals through the act of marriage, which they absolutely adored. Toby Alexander, their celebrant, was a particular hit with both the couple and the guests, putting together a ceremony that perfectly encapsulated Sabrina and Scott and their journey. Ultimately, the pair agreed that the best part of their day was getting to marry their best friend.

"As hard as it may be, try not to sweat the small stuff."
